

“Build the Monorail.
It’s time for city
officials to stop thwarting
the public will.”

- MAYOR GRIDLOCK

It takes leaders to finish a project as important to our city as the people’s monorail. Unfortunately, we ended up with a politician like Gridlock Greg Nickels, who would rather spend our money on roads and overpriced tunnels than true rapid transit.

The $11 billion price is gone and has been reduced to $3.9 billion through phasing and common sense changes. It’s the people’s dream at a great price, but politicians like Mayor Gridlock aren’t about to let things like “facts” get in the way of politics.

Let’s clearly say yes, yes, yes, yes and for the final time, yes. That’s five times we’ve told you yes, Mayor Gridlock. Don’t make us tell you again. Democracy is not to be trifled with.

“We can’t keep second guessing our decision to build a new monorail,
and risk continued
gridlock and frustration.
We need to move forward.”

“There is tremendous public support for the monorail. It's to Seattle what the cable car is to San Francisco.”
